

Jurgen Strijkers appointed as the new Managing Director of Computacenter

To reinforce local expertise and international influence

Zaventem, 1 July 2015 - IT services provider Computacenter appoints 37-year old Jurgen Strijkers as Managing Director for Belgium and the Netherlands. He succeeds Lie-ven Bergmans who moves to take charge of international coordination within the Computacenter group.

Jurgen Strijkers is not unknown at Computacenter. He began his career in 2001 as a support engineer with responsibility for client services. Over the years he was promoted to manager of various support teams before being appointed Head of Managed Services in 2007.

Thanks to its solid grounding in the European market and the availability of Infrastructure Operations Centres and Group Service Desks operating throughout Europe, South Africa and Asia, Computacenter guarantees its clients access to innovative technologies and a quality international services portfolio, as well as local expertise.

“We’re proud of the way in which we’ve forged our distinctive character”, declares Jurgen Strijkers, Managing Director of Computacenter for Belgium and the Netherlands. “In order to do this, we’ve favoured local expertise and long-term personal relations with our clients and partners. We intend to continue to uphold this distinctive character. Furthermore, we want to expand our customer service offer to include access to our data centres and shared service desks. By doing this, we give our clients a competitive edge, and at the same time we lay the foundations for robust local growth.”

Jurgen Strijkers is married with three daughters. In his free time he likes to indulge his passion for motorbiking, and occasionally takes part in a festival or variety show.
